VICTOR MOORE IN 'CAPTAIN JINKS' MISLEADING LADY STIRRING COMEDY AND AMATEURS AT BIG FEATURE FILM BIJOU THEATER

Hard luck and numerous accidents attended the filming of "The Race," the Liberty theater offering in which Victor Moore and Anita King are co-stars. Moore has appeared in a number of comedies but none that is as strenuous as this. Anita King has appeared in several Lasky offerings but never in so telling a part. To revert to the accidents, they numbered four in the first two days' work.

Victor Moore had a run in with the police during the first day's work and was arrested for driving his auto with the muffler open. The same day, while Miss King was trying out a racer which had been loaned to her by Barney Oldfield, she skidded on a slippery street and collided with a Ford, much to the disadvantage of the latter. The following day while watching the photographing of an explosion, Miss King was struck by a piece of flying rock and badly hurt, and Percy Hiltbourn, the man behind the camera, was knocked down by the force of the same explosion and damaged considerably.

With the exception of the things mentioned, the first two days passed without any particular trouble, although there are a number of "accident" scenes which were introduced into the film as the result of an experience of Miss King, who, last summer, crossed the continent in an auto unaccompanied.

"Captain Jinks is here tonight."

To swing the ladies to the right. So runs the old song that accompanied the children at their play a number of decades ago and it fits perfectly into the feature offering at the Bijou theater, "Capt. Jinks of the Horse Marines." This satire on society life of almost 50 years ago is one of Clyde Fitch's greatest offerings to the American drama and one that has brought him added fame since he passed away a few years ago. Richard Travers is seen in the main part while Ann Murdock, the "baby star" of the Frohman force, appears as Mme. Trentoni.

"Capt. Jinks" is a well-written, well-acted and well-produced film. It is a "big" film in every sense of the word. The action takes place in big places such as hotel lobbies, docks, New York streets, the Metropolitan Opera House and in the "upper city." Crowds, large, moving and restless, are ever in the background and Fred E. Wright, director of the picture, caught the spirit of bigness that Fitch put into the original story. There is scarcely a small set in the entire production.

In addition to this noteworthy film the Bijou will present, during the present week, a number of amateur acts. Good-sized prizes have been offered for amateur talent and the audience will be the judges of the merit of the acts. "Thumbs up" will mean a substantial slice of box-office receipts, while "thumbs down" will mean "the hook."

A woman can adjust her figure to show up best at the point she wants it to.

By the substitution of Henry B. Walthall, the star of "The Birth of a Nation," for Best Laid Plan, and Edna Mayo, the charming screen star, for Evelyn Vaughan, and then adding a wealth of detail that is impossible on the stage, some idea may be had of the feature offering at the Hawaii theater, "The Misleading Lady." This play was one of the most popular of the many popular offerings during the late Lytle Vaughan season of stock and it should prove one of the best photo-dramatic attractions shown at the Hawaii in some time.

It is a comedy of the highest order and one that gives opportunity to several aside from the "leads." The biggest part, outside of the leading man and leading woman—and considered by many as the biggest part in the play—is that of "Boney," an escaped "nut" who believes himself to be Napoleon.

The story of "The Misleading Lady" also is different from the usual photo-play and brings out a line of rapid-fire comedy, together with a number of tense situations, and completely upsets modern day methods of courtship and steps backwards to the days of the cave-man when man pitted brute strength against the cunning of woman's sex batteries.

BALBOA SEASON PLANS PUSH RAPIDLY FORWARD

The Pan-Pacific Club is now proceeding with the plans for its Balboa season observation in Honolulu. The first gathering will be at an afternoon reception on Alewa Heights, Saturday, Sept. 23, as the guests of Richard H. Trent, when the Pan-Pacific Club leaders will discuss plans for Pan-Pacific Day in the Mid-Pacific Carnival of 1917, and also send by wireless friendly greetings to the Hilo convention, and a hearty invitation that it hold its 1917 sessions in Honolulu.

It is expected that gatherings on a Pan-Pacific Day will be held at San Diego, Oakland, Sydney, Wellington and in several Japanese and Chinese cities.

HUNDREDS FEAST AT BIG LUAU AND HAVE ENJOYABLE AFTERNOON

One of the best attended and most enjoyable luaus ever celebrated in Honolulu was given Sunday in Poola Hall, Holokahana lane, by Mr. and Mrs. James C. Houghtaling in honor of the first birthday anniversary of their grandchild, Harry Apo, Jr.

On over a thousand personal invitations issued for the affair festivities were announced to begin at high noon and shortly after that time every chair in the large hall was taken and an overflow crowd of several hundred was comfortably seated under a broad awning at the side of the building.

Refreshments were served continuously to those both inside and outside the hall and the long tables sagged and groaned under the viands and delicacies so characteristic of the luau. A large group of Hawaiian players and singers furnished music throughout the afternoon.
